Reproduction of copyrighted material, without prior permission of the copyright owner, particularly in an educational setting, is not only illegal and punishable by law, but is an issue of concern for the academic community. Although copying all or part of a work without obtaining permission may appear to be an easy and convenient solution to an immediate problem, such unauthorized copying can frequently violate the rights of the author or publisher of the copyrighted work, and be directly contrary to the academic mission to teach respect for ideas and for the intellectual property that expresses those ideas.

With that in mind, the University Supply Store Academic Publishing Service has sought permission and paid proper royalties for all materials enclosed. The price of your reader reflects those necessary costs.
